

Third Sunday in Ordinary Time January 25, 2026

In our Gospel reading today we get two back-to-back examples of what it means to accept God's call to us, to truly follow God: first with brothers Simon and Andrew, and then with brothers James and John. In each case, Jesus approached them and told them to follow him; and in each case, they immediately stopped what they were doing and did so.

"Come after me, and I will make you fishers of men."

At once they left their nets and followed him.

"He called them, and immediately they left their boat and their father and followed him."

This was not simply a one-day work strike, or a telling your boss that something came up and you are checking out early; this is a renunciation of the life you had been living, and a whole-hearted and complete turning towards a new way of living and being.

With Simon and Andrew, Jesus emphasizes that what they had believed was their vocation—to catch fish that would feed the people—was too being transformed into catching people so that they could be truly fed. With James and John, they not only immediately left their work, but also their father, their family, and followed Jesus. This "yes" that we are being called to make does not come without sacrifice, without a sincere and painful re-orienting of our life towards God—even potentially by means of distancing ourselves from some loved ones along the way. We must ask ourselves, "does this serve God?" Such is the inherent cost of transformation, for as we progress from darkness to light there is inevitably a "leaving" that must occur.

As Isaiah had said, "the people who sit in darkness have seen a great light, on those dwelling in a land overshadowed by death light has arisen." Where once they caught and killed fish to be eaten, they now will capture the hearts of the many so that they may truly live.

May we have the courage to do the same.

Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of St. Louis is dedicated to bringing the healing, help, and hope of Jesus Christ to those in need with a compassionate, caring presence. Catholic Charities has been a leader with the Archdiocese of St. Louis in helping people recover after they have experienced the effects of a disaster. Through Natural Disaster Case Management, we help people address the disaster related needs that they encounter and work with on their journey to recover. Our team is working directly with families impacted by the Tornado on March 14th in Jefferson County and May 16th in Saint Louis City. For more information or to get involved, please contact your Parish Ambassador Kelly Collins at kelly.collins60@gmail.com.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

St. Louis University Hospital is looking for more volunteers to offer Communion to Catholic patients. Some ministers commit to one day a week, some once or twice a month. It usually takes about two hours to visit all the patients who wish to receive. Jennifer Wilkerson, Administrative Assistant for the Pastoral Care Department at the hospital, can answer any questions you have and direct you to next steps. You may call the Pastoral Care office (314-257 8700) weekdays 8:30 am to 5:00 pm to speak with her or contact her by email: Jennifer.wilkerson@ssmhealth.com

St. Cronan Catholic Church Land Acknowledgement.
