

Fourth Sunday in Ordinary Time February 1, 2026

Blessed are they who know their need of God.

“I can do it myself!” This was 3-year old me sitting at the workbench in the basement next to my dad. Since we are both stubborn, this could have been a standoff had my mother not intervened and told my dad to let me do it my way. Arguing with a 3-year old is not helpful.

This is one of my earliest memories when we lived on Telegraph Road. Too often this has been the way I have approached my relationship with God. I suspect I am not alone in telling God how to do things because I know what I want.

As we mature in our faith life, we learn that we are called to love as God loves. We recognize that God loves us unconditionally. We can become more open to needing God. The times we are living in make us keenly aware of needing God individually and communally. God saves us, not in a deus ex machina way, but by drawing us near and loving us. We who are made in the image and likeness of God are called to extend that love lavishly.

The Gospel reading, the Beatitudes, illustrate God’s love. Jesus embodied this love and invites us to live as he did. Blessed are they who mourn, who are gently strong and concerned for others, who hunger and thirst for righteousness, who are merciful, who have integrity and honesty in relating to God and people, who are peacemakers, and who are persecuted for the sake of justice. This way of life is a great contrast to the cultural and the religious world in which we live. Jesus promises fullness of life and deep joy in the midst of the struggles and pain that will ensue if we choose to live the Gospel Jesus preached and lived.

Doing it “my way” can close us off from God and our communities. It can close us off from the love God freely offers and invites us to share.

Blessed are they who know their need of God. This translation in one of my Bibles opened my prayer to a new way of understanding “poor in spirit.” It challenged me to reflect on what needing God in my life, in our lives, demands. The coming week could be a good time to reflect on each of the beatitudes during prayer. How does each one invite me to respond to the Good News of Jesus? How does each one help me realize God’s love and my vocation to share that love – working toward the unconditional part that only God does.

*Blessed are they who know their
need of God.*

Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of St. Louis is dedicated to bringing the healing, help, and hope of Jesus Christ to those in need with a compassionate, caring presence. We provide services through all stages of life, from the beginning of life to senior care. Catholic Charities Disaster Case Management teams are working hard to permanently house families after losing their homes in the Spring 2025 storms. The House to Home Program directly supports a family that is moving into their first permanent place to live. Does your family, parish group, or school want to adopt a family. For more information or to get involved, please contact your Parish Ambassador Kelly Collins at kelly.collins60@gmail.com.

St. Cronan Social Justice Book Club

Club meets on the 2nd Sunday of each month in the Church office conference room after the 10AM Mass from 11:30AM-12:30PM. Our February 8th book is "I Am Not Your Negro" by James Baldwin. There is a documentary of the same name. We invite you to join us in person or simply read with us. Looking ahead the March 8th book will be Insane for the Light: A Spirituality for Our Wisdom Years by Ronald Holheiser.

St. Cronan Catholic Church Land Acknowledgement.
